What we measured

We asked the same 15 buyer-intent prompts about used-car / financing options in each of Owings Auto's two markets — Arlington and Fort Worth — on 8 AI assistants, every week since April. 15 prompts × 8 platforms = 120 answers per location per week. Prompts span 3 categories: Buy Here Pay Here, Flexible Monthly Payments, and Used Car Dealership. Visibility = the share of a location's answers that mention Owings Auto.

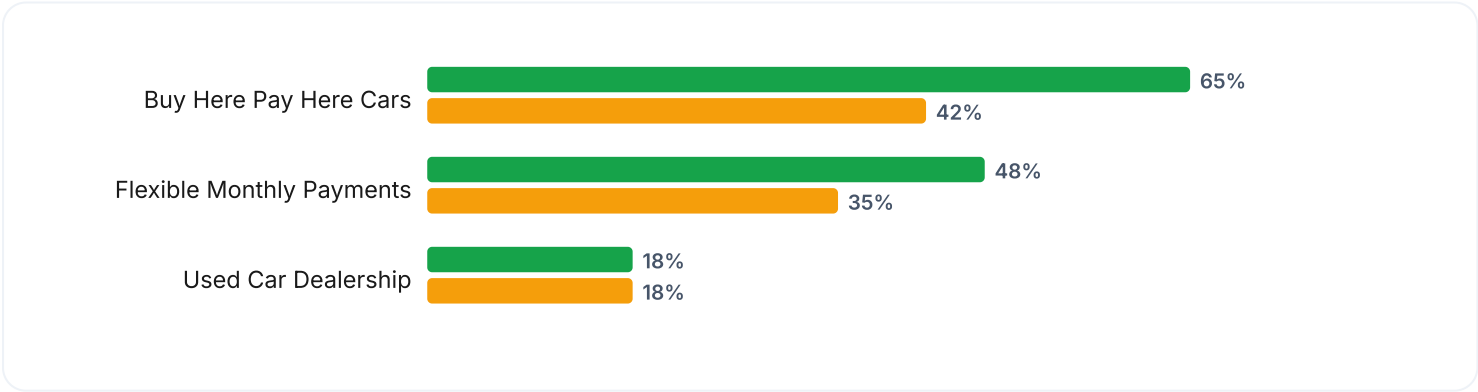

Visibility over time — Arlington wins, Fort Worth is catching up

Arlington has held a steady 32–43 since April. Fort Worth was volatile and low (10–17) through mid-May, then jumped to ~31 — the new Fort Worth blog kicking in. The gap is closing, but Arlington still leads.

Latest visibility, by category

Owings wins on its niche — Buy Here Pay Here and flexible-payment queries — in both markets. The generic "Used Car Dealership" category is the weakest (18% in both): too broad and crowded to win on brand alone.

CATEGORY	ARLINGTON	FORT WORTH
Buy Here Pay Here Cars	65%	42%
Flexible Monthly Payments	48%	35%
Used Car Dealership	18%	18%

Where Owings ranks in each local field

The clearest signal of the gap. In Arlington, Owings is the #1-named dealer (53 mentions, ahead of 5 Stars Autos and AutoMax). In Fort Worth, Owings is #4 (39) — behind entrenched incumbents Luxury Auto, Russell Smith, and Cowtown. Citation share (own-site links as a share of all citations): Arlington 5.1% vs Fort Worth 3.4%.

Top cited sources & the type of content, per location

What AI pulls from in each market. The bulk of citations in both are other dealers' sites (each answer lists several dealerships), followed by review sites and directories. The difference is how much of that ecosystem is Owings: Arlington's own pages + third-party Owings profiles show up far more than Fort Worth's.

What page types actually win — and the top cited URLs

Breaking open the "other dealers' sites" bucket. Across every citation, the most-cited page type by far is the homepage, then location / area pages and financing pages. That's the competitor playbook: their homepage + a local page + a financing page get pulled over and over. Below is the full page-type split, then the actual top cited URLs in each market (clickable — Owings rows in green) so you can see exactly which pages win.

What Owings brings — the actual cited links

Owings' own pages and the third-party profiles that mention Owings (clickable). This is the crux: Arlington is corroborated across 9 third-party profiles (Facebook, Yelp, CarEdge, BBB, Birdeye, MapQuest, Indeed, Instagram, AutosToday); Fort Worth has almost none.

Why Owings wins Arlington but not Fort Worth

Unlike a thin-content problem, Owings' Fort Worth pages are actually good — its Fort Worth blog is cited 22× (more than Arlington's 14×) and it has DFW / Buy-Here-Pay-Here location pages. The gap is off-site authority and entity footprint, not on-page content.

SIGNAL	ARLINGTON (WINNING)	FORT WORTH (LAGGING)
Rank in local field	#1 of 240	#4 of 225 (behind 3 entrenched dealers)
Homepage cited	46×	14×
Third-party profiles citing Owings	9 sites, ~25 citations (Facebook, Yelp, CarEdge, BBB, Birdeye, MapQuest, Indeed, Instagram, AutosToday)	2 citations (and one is the Arlington Yelp page)
Own content	strong	also strong — blog cited 22×, DFW + BHPH pages exist
Local competitors	beatable (5 Stars, AutoMax)	entrenched (Luxury Auto 63, Russell Smith 56, Cowtown 41)

The mechanism: Arlington is Owings' home market — they're the top-named dealer, the homepage is strongly tied to the city, and the brand is corroborated across the whole review/directory ecosystem AI pulls from. Fort Worth is a contested satellite: the on-page content is fine, but with almost no off-site footprint and three entrenched incumbents, AI doesn't corroborate Owings as a Fort Worth dealer. The lever is off-site, not on-page.

Recommendations

1. Build Fort Worth's off-site profile footprint. Get Owings listed and complete on the exact platforms that corroborate Arlington — CarEdge, BBB, Yelp, Birdeye, MapQuest, AutosToday, Cars.com / CarGurus / DealerRater — with the Fort Worth location, hours, and inventory. Today Fort Worth has essentially zero third-party citations; Arlington has nine profiles.
2. Drive Fort Worth reviews. Review sites (Yelp, BBB, Birdeye, Google) are heavily cited. Run a review push for Fort Worth customers so the location accrues its own corroborated reputation, not Arlington's.
3. Fix the split-listing problem. AI sometimes cites the Arlington Yelp/profile under Fort Worth queries — make sure a distinct Fort Worth (or DFW) profile exists and is claimed so the entity is unambiguous.
4. Keep expanding the local-blog pattern — it's working. The Fort Worth "best bad-credit dealerships" blog is the single most-cited Owings page there (22×). Replicate it for long-tail Fort Worth / DFW neighborhoods and BHPH sub-topics (they already have HEB, Grand Prairie pages).
5. Don't chase the generic "used car dealership" category. It's 18% everywhere and dominated by volume players. Double down on the Buy-Here-Pay-Here / bad-credit / flexible-payment niche where Owings already wins.
6. Re-check monthly (the weekly reports already run). Track Fort Worth's rank (#4 → top 2) and third-party citation count (2 → match Arlington's 9) as the KPIs.
